

Hi everyone, I'm back for my final installment. My name is Jim McGorman and I'm part of the Rockstar house band.

The past two seasons have featured contrasting styles of music; from a house band perspective did you find one more challenging than the other?

Not really. Although this year was more rock music, I still feel diversity within the season. We still went from Peter Gabriel to Billy Idol. From Aerosmith to The Killers. It's always

As a solo artist, your band, Jamestown, has just released its premiere album, The World is Falling Down. Tell us about the band, the music and your contribution to the project?

Well, Jamestown is my baby. I've been working on music my entire life, and this is my first full-length record. I wrote – or co-wrote – all the songs, produced the record, and obviously played guitar, keys and sang. I've been

"The important thing for me is to live in the moment; you can get so caught up in the hype of the show, or the possibilities of things, but you have to remember to have fun with it."

challenging to play multiple styles within the same set.

The house band is going to open the premiere dates for Supernova New Years Eve in Las Vegas. What can we expect from this show?

Well, first let me set the record straight, because there seems to be a lot of confusion about this. The house band is not playing in Las Vegas. It is the only town we are not playing. Not really sure why, but we start the tour January 16th. The show will start with the house band playing with Dilana, Tobay, Magni and Storm. Then the Panis Channel – then Supernova.

working with a lot of the same musicians over the years in L.A.; the drummer (Dave Allen), bass player (Jon Button), and I have been working on original stuff for almost seven years. The three of us played for Michelle Branch when I was her Musical Director from 2001 to 2002.

Emerson Swinford (guitar) and I have been writing and playing together for longer than that, and David Levita (guitar) has been a great contribution to the recording process. Though we are all pro players and are generally really busy working on other projects (to pay the bills), this is something we have done for ourselves. I am incredibly proud of the record and how we all worked together to make it happen. We'll see where it goes from here.
